Center opening delayed

Uncontrollable circumstances have postponed the opening of the $2 million Wheeler Recreation Center until the end of April. E & F Construction Co. is working on the center and is expected to complete the steel superstructure,

Knights' win rough contest

By CLIFF COADY

The fiery madness of desire so symbolic of this year's Purple Knights was not in the eyes of the Bridgeport squad as they took the court before Tuesday night's game against Trenton State College.

The reason was obvious. Trenton State is not known for its basketball prowess. With a small roster (eight players) and an even smaller team (no one over 6'3"), the Lions from Jersey looked almost embarrassed warming up on the same court as their powerful opponents.

Bridgeport knew they had a sure win while they were dressing in the locker room. But there's more to basketball than putting on the uniform. There's also playing.

After struggling the first half, the Knights went on to defeat Trenton State 79-70 in the first night of the two-day, four-team Bridgeport Invitational Tournament. Last night, The Knights and Western State College played for the tournament championship (see Tuesday's Scribe for details).

"No incentive, man" Carlton Hurdle said lying face down on the trainer's table after the game. Hurdle, Bridgeport's intimidating center, scored 18 points in the game before leaving early because of a back injury he received after being thumped to the floor in a rebound attempt.

"It's just a bruise in his lower back," trainer Bill Rice said while looking over the injured athlete. "Because he jumps so high, he fell so hard. He should be ready by tomorrow."

"I hope so," Hurdle responded to the diagnosis. "I want to be ready to help this team. Not like tonight. I hurt them more than I helped them. We should have won by 30. What was I, 4 for 30? All layups."

"We play well when we have to. I don't play well against little guys. I just couldn't get into the game, man. It was a lucky thing

Miles to miss vote

University President Leland Miles will reportedly be absent from a general faculty meeting which will review his ability as chief administrator.

Miles is scheduled to attend a Board of Trustees meeting Wednesday when faculty members have been called to decide whether to have a vote of confidence in the president.

The vote of confidence would be an attempt to elicit a negative response from the faculty. This action is rarely taken by any faculty. A vote of no confidence in the president would only be a show of dissatisfaction because the Board of Trustees has total authority in employment of the president.

Faculty members are scheduled to meet in the College of Nursing from 3 to 5 p.m.

Help needy

Saint Steven's and Saint Luke's churches in Bridgeport sponsor emergency food programs for needy people in the area.

Saint Steven's is a Catholic church and Saint Luke's is Episcopalian, but the food programs are open to anyone.

The Rev. Gerald Devore of the Interfaith Center said the churches help about 80 to 100 families each month by providing food. He said most of them are elderly or fatherless families or people who are new to the area.

If you would like to contribute your help to these people, you can do so through The Scribe. Every year during the holiday season The Scribe tries to raise money for a needy cause. Just fill out the coupon and send it to The Scribe, Student Center. Checks may be made out to The Scribe. Please hurry, there is only one week left and so far the response has been poor.

Center to open later

A steel haulers strike in Pennsylvania and a delay in steel production has pushed the opening of the Wheeler Recreation Center back from April 15 until the end of April.

Harry Rowell Jr., vice president of business and finance, received Tuesday, an updated construction schedule. He said a strike by steel haulers in Pittsburg, Pa. and a separate delay in a steel shipment from Allegheny Ludlum Industries will postpone opening of the recreation center.

The construction schedule takes into account work time that may be lost because of bad weather, Rowell said.

He said during September and October, when heavy rains were expected, the work crew "got ahead of itself because of the good weather. We've only lost two days of work because of the weather last week. But the time we got ahead was lost because of the delay in production."

Rowell said he expects the center's steel superstructure to be completed soon. Then about 18 inches of gravel will be laid, and asphalt put down. This should be completed by next month, he added.

The structure must be enclosed before any interior work can begin. A prolonged strike in Pittsburg could prolong the opening of the center.

BOD plan

Harry Chapin, Santana and the new Cheech and Chong movie, "Up in Smoke," are some possibilities for activities next semester.

Scott Kimbriel, Concert Committee chairman for the Student Center Board of Directors, said these events are being considered.

Mountaineering #3

METHODOLOGY

Mountaineering, as all but the chronically misinformed know, is the skill, the science and the art of drinking Busch Beer. It begins by heading for the mountains (i.e., a quick jaunt to your favorite package emporium or wateringhole) and ends by downing the mountains (i.e., slow slaking swallows of the brew that is Busch).

¶ However, between those two points lies a vast area of personal peccadilloes sometimes called technique and sometimes called methodology (depending on your major). Hence, this ad. ¶ Sipping vs. chugging. Both have their merits, of course. But generally speaking, except for cases of extreme thirst or a leaking glass, sipping is the more prudent practice for serious, sustained mountaineering. ¶ Next, the proper position. Some swear by sitting; others by standing. Suffice it to say that the most successful mountaineers are flexible, so you'll find both sitters and standers.

(Except on New Year's Eve, when it's almost impossible to find a sitter.) ¶ Which brings us to additives. Occasionally a neophyte will sprinkle salt in his Busch; others mix in tomato juice; and a few on the radical fringe will even add egg. While these manipulations can't be prohibited (this is, after all, a free country), they are frowned upon. Please be advised that purity is a virtue, and the natural refreshment of Busch is best uncompromised.

¶ Finally, there's the issue of containers. Good taste dictates a glass be used. But bad planning sometimes prevents that. If you find yourself forced to drink from the can, you should minimize this breach of etiquette. Be formal. Simply let your little finger stick out stiffly (see Fig. 4). Happy Mountaineering!

Don't just reach for a beer.

Head for the mountains.

Egypt and Bulgaria end diplomatic ties

Egypt and Bulgaria have broken off diplomatic relations with one another following a shooting incident at the Bulgarian Embassy in Cairo.

Guards at the embassy prevented a woman and her two daughters from entering the embassy, in which they have lived for 40 years. When Egyptians protested, a guard fired shots into the air to disperse the protesters.

With President Sadat's permission, police confiscated arms and ammunition in the embassy. Bulgarian officials claim this was an invasion of the embassy, and Egyptian officials say Bulgaria has violated diplomatic practice.

The countries' ambassadors are planning to return to their respective nations.

Elections start in Namibia

Elections in the Southwest African state, Namibia, started this week. Two bombs were set during the first two days of the election, and the voting is reportedly heavy despite a call from the Southwest African People's Organization to boycott the elections.

The UN and many western nations have refused to recognize the elections.

Speak on security

With all the gripes about residence hall security that reaches our ears we hope all students will take advantage of the committees that are going to be set up in the dorms to decide what kind of security programs will be best for the dorms.

Assistant Director of Residence Halls Paul DeGennaro has taken the initiative to find out what kind of security will be the best kind, but students are going to have to let him know how they feel. It is our security that we are talking about now so we have to make sure we get what we want.

The survey that was taken in October to find out what kind of security students want wasn't enough for the Office of Residence Halls for some reason. Obviously students didn't impress upon them the fact that we are very serious about our security.

Well now is the time gang. They want to know how we feel so get out in force and tell them. Go to the committee meetings that are going to be held in the dorms and demand proper security for your dorm. Tell them what kind of security you want and don't hold back.

And let's tell these people in residence halls that we don't want to wait until next semester before a security plan is worked out.

We want 24-hour protection, seven days a week. That means if they have to hire guards to do it or put in tv cameras at all doorways, then they had better do it. We have the right to live without fear, to go to classes without fearing for our life and the right to sleep in Schine of Bodine or Barnum halls without being afraid.

So let's all get out and tell the administration that we want protection and we want it now.

Shot In The Dark

Stripping off sexual mores

By Dan Tepfer

OK, who's the wise guy that made sex a dirty word? I know you are out there, I can hear your heavy breathing. It's you guys that give everyone else a bad name.

Ask any Freudian psychologist and he'll tell you, it's our own bloody social mores toward sexual behavior that is making people go haywire. Why here's one now, let's ask him.

SHOT: Excuse me sir, what in your opinion is the major reason for persons going haywire?

Freudian Psychologist That Happened To Be Walking Down The Street At That Moment: Well young man, I would say it is our own bloody social mores towards sexual behavior.

See, what did I tell you.

So what's going on? You can't even get a good lay anymore, guy or girl, without having to worry about whether you are going to have to set up a phony relationship with the layee just so you won't feel guilty for having a good time. Then you end up breaking up with the person because the only reason you were together in the first place was because you had sex.

Is it any wonder that you have people ripping off their clothes in public and running down the middle of streets, people urinating on park benches and pornography? With our own hangup on S-E-X we have created this lunacy. It's incredible but people are making millions by exploiting our hangup on sex. Do you honestly think that there would be as many porno shops, porno movies or prostitutes if we were more open about sex?

But hold on. I am not suggesting that we should all start jumping on each other and start wild orgies. For if we suddenly began having sexual relations left and right just for the hell of doing it then it could become as meaningless and pleasurable as eating 600 chocolate bars. After a while you just get tired of eating chocolate bars.

But this doesn't mean that our sexual habit should be governed by a small group of people. Nobody should have the right to prevent two consenting adults from having sex. Hey, I don't stop you from eating, why should you stop me from having sex. It doesn't do you any harm and it certainly doesn't hurt me.

Now I figure I can make these comments because we are all adults. I don't expect anyone to start parading in the streets in support of sexual openness, but I don't expect to get banned in Bridgeport either. How about just a snicker here or there.

Hell, in high school this kind of talk would have caused quite a stir.

I had this one English teacher....well she used to come to class dressed in white go-go boots and a pink mini skirt. Naturally she was over 50 and this happened in 1972. But when it came to sex, she closed right up like a clam. We used to read a lot of poetry out loud in class, but when it came to reading love sonnets or slightly riske poems, that was to be done in the privacy of our own homes. Instead of saying sex, she always spelled it out, and she only did this after asking all the girls to leave the room.

But no need to worry about the girls, they used to go out into the hall and read Playgirl magazine. They knew more about sex than we did.

I learned about sex in the street. I was walking to the bus stop one morning by myself. I had to tie mom to the kitchen table to get out of the house myself. She didn't buy the story that 15-year-old boys can get to the bus stop without the help of their mothers. Anyway, on my way to the bus stop I came across a rather crude drawing of unclothed, 16-year-old Libby Goldstein, who lived at the end of the street. As I said, it was a rather crude drawing done in chalk on the black tar of the road, but it made a big impression. As a matter of fact, I missed the school bus because of it.

I rushed home, untied my mother and told her about the drawing. That was a mistake. I wasn't allowed to go to the bus stop by myself until 10th grade. But that experience had left its mark on me. I definitely wanted to see more of Libby Goldstein.

Unfortunately, by the time I got enough courage to approach the model of the drawing, she had gained 150 pounds and had been married five years to the artist.

But I got over this experience, now I just attack little girls in the park. But seriously folks, let's try to be a little more open about sex. It might not make it any easier to get laid, but it could stop a lot of nice people from forming phony relationships and ruining each other.

Off The Sleeve

By Rob Guinan

Getting lost on Wall Street

Nothing! I repeat, NOTHING, is going to hold me back when I graduate from becoming the biggest success story ever. I don't need any fancy resumes or references from my department chairman. I'm going into business for myself. I've got some money-making schemes that will make me the 'Wizard of Wall Street.' My name is Morgan, but it ain't J.P. If you don't believe me, ask Vice-President Rowell; he borrows money from me all the time.

They are always doing feature articles on me in Fortune, Money and Business Week. I wrote the book, "How to turn 5 cents into 5 million in 5 minutes." Here's what I've got planned: I'm test-marketing a new breakfast cereal that doesn't go snap, crackle and pop—it goes burp, sneeze and belch. It's one of the noisiest breakfast cereals ever invented. But that's O.K. because it's competitive selling point is that it serves as a combination cereal and alarm clock. Sure to be a hit!

I'm starting a computerized dating service for guys and gals on Cape Cod in Provincetown, Massachusetts. Have you ever been to Provincetown? It's a gay and happy place.

Also, I'm opening up a Coppertone Sales Division office in Angola.

I'm going to become so rich that I will be lighting cigars with $100 bills.

I plan to open the first combination Pinto-Edsel car dealership ever. My studies indicate that Pintos get the most publicity out of any other car. That's free advertising! Every time you turn around, they're showing them off on the six o'clock news. They must be good! I was going to open a Toyota dealership, but I used to own a Toyota and all it did was blow smoke out the exhaust. So I sold it to the American Cancer Society.

I used to buy old cars, fix them up and then sell them for less. But now I'm smarter, I buy them but I don't fix them up and I don't sell them. We had our house knocked down to make room in the yard for 47 used cars.

My biggest business adventure of all though will be the first vegetarian McDonalds. Egg McBroccoli served by none other than Mayor McCole Slaw. I can't miss with this one.

I asked the renowned Dow T. Jones, formerly of Yale, and a distinguished professor of economics what he thought of my ideas. His reply was, "Well, they're certainly original. Very gutsy and shrewd!"

President Miles and Vice-President Rowell come to me for financial advice. I got this school out of the red. I used Visine!! I opened up a chain of Lemonade stands in Toronto and I sold Amana refrigerators in Anchorage, Alaska to the Eskimos.

I'm currently studying some new options that have come my way. A crystal shop on the San Andreas fault. Also the manufacturer's of Hawaiian Punch are test-marketing a new fruit punch in Jonestown, Guyana and they would like me to introduce this refreshing, fruit-flavored drink in Moscow.

If any of you are a little short on cash though and you're planning on going out somewhere special, don't be proud, give me a ring. I'll be glad to give you a few 20's. What good is money if you can't share it with people you care about? But remember what Carl Malden says, "don't forget to carry American Express Travelers checks, if they're lost or stolen, the hell with you buddy we don't know you."

(Rob Guinan writes a weekly column).

Honors

Dear Editor:

May we claim the hospitality of your columns to bring to the attention of next year's seniors the advantages of the Honors Program offered by the College of Arts and Sciences. Those who meet the requirements will earn the distinction of graduating with honors in their major.

This program offers outstanding students an opportunity to undertake advanced study in their major by pursuing their own special interests. In this way they will enrich their knowledge and acquire experience of the kind of scholarly work they would encounter in graduate programs.

Honors students are granted the same library privileges as graduates, and upon completion of the requirements have their theses bound and placed in the Wahlstrom Library. Their diplomas and transcripts will specify their distinguished status.

Any students are eligible who, by the end of the first semester of their junior year, have earned a Q.P.R. of 3.5 or above in their major and 3.0 and above in their other courses.

There is more to the program than this brief letter indicates. We call attention to it at this time because we are confident that many qualified students will want to avail themselves of the opportunity of earning honors in their major.

Anyone wishing further information should contact one of us as soon as possible.

Yours sincerely,
Thomas Juliusburger (History)
Chairperson, Honors Committee

The better bite alternative

Tucked away above Barnaby's in University Square is a cafeteria with better food than you can get on campus.

And for about the same price as the Student Center cafeteria, you also get a wide selection.

It is the Warnaco cafeteria. It's for Warnaco employees but students and faculty members eat there too.

They offer hamburgers and sandwiches every day and change the hot lunch menu daily. The day I was there, they had lasagna and salad for $1.80, which looked very appetizing. Hamsteak with peas and carrots and potatoes au gratin was $1.90.

In my haste and financial condition, I opted for the hamburger for 70 cents (I could

The hamburger tasted pretty good but it was small. The bun seemed to overpower it. The fries were huge and cooked through and through (something you won't always find in the Student Center Cafeteria).

My friend had the tuna sub for $1.15. He said it was "pretty good, at least the bread isn't soggy".

Prices seemed reasonable: .60 cents for a hot dog, $1.25 for a roast beef sandwich and $1.25 for ham and cheese.

The atmosphere is the type found in nice restaurants. It isn't noisy like most cafeterias. There's wall to wall carpeting on the split level floor, lots of large windows and modern decor using lots of wood. It doesn't have the usual greyish fluorescent lights. Instead many hanging lamps adorn the room.

Eating at Warnaco's cafeteria is a good change of pace and it's right in our own backyard. Just walk in the hallway next to the Gazebo and straight back to an elevator. Take the elevator to the third floor and make a right.

for Jerry (Steuerer). He helped me out, he got my missed shots and made some baskets. He kept me from acting like a goat. The incentive just wasn't there tonight."

Maybe it wasn't there because it all seemed so easy in the first two minutes of the game. Trenton gave the ball back to Bridgeport the first four times they had it due to turnovers. After a pair of baskets by Steuerer and one each from Kevin O'Neill, Al Bakunas and Hurdle, the Knights led 10-3 with little effort. The Knights were playing defense like a dream and the offense was scoring points nonchalantly. But two minutes does not a game make and Trenton began to come back.

With some key shooting from Kevin Kulhawy (a thorn in the Knights' side all night with 26 points), Trenton pulled it to 12-7. The only thing that kept the Knights in the lead was the all-cotton attack of O'Neill who swished his first five shots and had 10 points with 10 minutes left in the period. His shooting kept the Knights five to 10 points ahead of the Lions, but quickly gathered three fouls and had it sit down with Bridgeport leading 28-18. When he left the game, he took the offense with him.

With half time only a minute away, the Knights found themselves commanding only a four-point lead, 36-32. The Knights defense couldn't keep Trenton away from the basket, and, without O'Neill, the offense lacked its usual brilliance.

"Like I said before, Kevin is the key to our offense," Hurdle said, "And tonight he was hitting."

"With Kevin as hot as he was, we missed him," Churchill said.

"I felt pretty good," O'Neill said. "I was getting the ball and some good shots. I don't know about the fouls. I guess I was a little tired and I was reaching in on defense instead of getting my body over. Anyway, I got a good rest and I'll be ready for tomorrow's game."

Billy Orr picked up a blocked Carlton Hurdle shot and dropped it in for the final two points of the half. Bridgeport led 38-32 and Trenton went into the locker room surprised they were still in the game.

"We play 27 games this year and we can't get up for everyone of them," Churchill said. "We're as up as our competitors. It's like we play at their level. We weren't playing Fairfield tonight. I guess we play at the skill of our opponents."

Churchill scored the first points of the second half when he turned a Trenton turnover into two quick points. Bridgeport started to control the flow of the game but Trenton became annoying when they matched almost all of the Knight's baskets. O'Neill departed for the evening when he was nailed with his fourth foul late in the game. Brian Moriarty, a scoring guard in the fashion of O'Neill, entered the game. He made his presence felt when he swished a 15-footer to make the score 62-49 which just about put Trenton away for the night.

Moriarty, a 6-foot freshman from Rockville Center, N.Y., proved to everyone that he can be counted on in a clutch situation.

"Brian did a super job," Steuerer said. "He seemed poised and on top of his game and I think he's going to help us in the future."

"I noticed from the bench," O'Neill added, "that Brian was playing a good game. He'll be important, like, if I foul out in a big game or something. We know he can come in and do the job."

"The game gave me a feeling of confidence," Moriarty said. "Once I got the feel of the ball and the flow of the game, I felt good. If I got my shot I would take it."

"The seniors really helped me out with my game. Like Churchill would come up to me and tell what I should look for. That's what I like about the team. It's the atmosphere. Everybody's close to each other, like before a game everybody's wishing everybody good luck. We don't hope for the other player to miss the shot so we can get in. We want them to make it so we can win."

Lady Knights give coach uneasy feeling

By RUSS THIBEAULT

Women's basketball coach Debbie Polca found Monday's scrimmage versus Wesleyan University a golden opportunity to appraise her club's assets and liabilities. After an hour-or-so of some in-depth visual analysis, she left the gym with an uneasy feeling, for the bad seemed to outweigh the good. "We still have a big problem with inexperience, which probably won't be resolved until later this month or even as far as mid-January," the Lady Knight mentor acknowledged, "our rebounding also needs some improvement as does our learning of the man-to-man strategy."

Not intending to make excuses, Polca is faced with a problem she may not have anticipated this early in the season—fatigue. She attributes this problem partly to the fact that many of her players are active participants in other sports and also feels they are in need of a respite from school work. The solution: the Christmas break... (hopefully). "Right now, only a few players are really pushing and giving their all," she laments, "I'll tell you, I hope the week or week and a half does us some good because fatigue is definitely figuring into our problems."

She continued, "We should have a week and a half vacation followed by a five-week layoff (Dec. 9 to Jan. 19), when there are no games scheduled." Polca admits this period may prove very progressive. "During this time we'll probably iron out our problems. In order to help us, I'll try and schedule a scrimmage game but it'll have to be against a stiff competitor because in order to benefit in scrimmages, you have to play a team of equal or better strength than you," she said.

Much like other athletic teams, the basketballers were dealt a damaging blow early because of internal problems (the strike). Polca concedes its effect has been detrimental to the pride and spirit of a majority of her players, which is understandable. One needs not be an authority in psychology to realize that happiness and contentment lends itself to an atmosphere conducive to overwhelming results, and in sports, happiness and contentment breeds success. "Because of the strike I've even had players tell me they were thinking about transferring," Polca said with a noticeable air of frustration in her voice. "How can you possibly build on a young program with problems and attitudes like that?"

When asked if there were any elements that may help restore the rapidly decaying attitude, Polca contends much depends on the individual undertakings of her players,

"They will have to make demands on themselves without having to be told." And only when these attributes are realized will the team reach the potential of which it is capable."

Key Players

Jane Ryan—Jane is very strong physically and with additional game experience should prove invaluable to our attack.
Sue McCaughern—A very good shooter who will be even more effective when she learns to think a bit more.
Kim Boudreau—A seasoned veteran who is an excellent playmaker with plenty of skill.
Lola Reid—(UB's second highest scorer in the season opener against Westfield). Lola is very quick and that adds much to our offensive game.
Melissa Marshall—An excellent passer who shows a lot of initiative and is a very hard worker.

LET'S GO

Business has not been thriving at the concession stand during Purple Knight basketball games and the concessionaries are bewildered. "I don't know what it is," said one obviously distraught counterperson. "Our soda is 35 cents and we have potato chips and cheese twists and stuff. You know, business has really dropped off. We can watch a whole basketball game almost unbothered."

"Just tell the people to party before the game," added his business partner, "and then come to us for munchies. We're getting lonely. At least someone should come over to say hi."

More on this as it progresses.

THE BASKETBALL

Knights will host Bryant College Saturday night at 8. Bryant College finished fourth in last year's NCAA regionals as Bridgeport finished third. The game rates as the first real important game of the season.

AND...

on Monday night the Knights will host University of Maryland at 7:30.
